GOSSIP OF THE GALLOWS

Program of Exercises Which Will Swing Guiteau Into Eternity.

He is Sullen and Insulting to the Jail Officials and Guards.

Thrilling Description of the Death Trap and Fearful Surroundings.

Everything in Readiness to Give the Assassin a Speedy Send off To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Gen Crocker, the warden of the district jail, has completed all of his arrangements for the execution of Guiteau to-morrow. Men were at work on the scaffold nearly all day yesterday, bolstering it up and steadying it in a number of places, besides building the box connection with the cell through which the rope to the trap is to be worked. Two or three of the colored workmen spent about an hour springing the trap, to make sure that it will work easily. Guiteau, if he had been at his window, could have heard the quick jerk and spring of this heavy door. Indeed he must have been annoyed considerably by the hammering and pounding in his part of the jail. A change has been made with the scaffold. It has been found that the drop would interfere with the view of the body after it was allowed to fall. The hinges have been changed to the other end, and now when the drop falls it will be behind the body, which will be in full view all the time.

THE JAIL AUTHORITIES have received a number of letters and telegrams from politicians, newspaper proprietors, and others, asking for tickets of admission to the hanging. None of them will be granted. It is understood that none but resident newspaper correspondents will be admitted. Passes have been refused to senators and members of congress. Guiteau's body will be turned over to his brother and sister immediately after the execution, and they will make the arrangements for its interment. All of the applications for the body from showmen and other speculators have been refused. The Guiteaus have not yet decided where it will be buried. Guiteau was very sullen and quiet to-day. He is evidently doing a good deal of hard thinking. He varies his moroseness with chanting pious gibberish with his spiritual adviser.

HIS RELIGION is so distressingly beyond anything the spiritual adviser can produce that the latter really is a pupil in the hands of the prisoner. The warden, in speaking of him to-day, said: "For all his supposed meekness, if he could gain one day of life by cutting the throat of his spiritual adviser he would do it in a minute." Underneath all of Guiteau's talk, says the warden, there is an undercurrent of savagery. This has been particularly shown to-day. One of the guards said that the prisoner has taken it into his head to be as mean as he can. He is disagreeable in his manner to the guards, and is continually asking for things in the most annoying way. The warden has an idea that Guiteau will keep getting uglier and uglier until the last moment, and that he will, when brought out for execution, break out into a declamation of abuse, such as was exhibited by him in the court during various stages of the trial.

THE PROGRAM for the execution is a very short one. The warden estimates that it will not take over twenty minutes from the time he enters the cell to summon Guiteau, until the assassin will be hanging by the rope on the gallows. The sentence is that Guiteau shall be executed between the hours of 12 and 2 p. m. to-morrow. It has been customary, when two hours leeway is given, for the warden to give the first hour to the prisoner and to occupy the last hour with the preliminaries of the execution. The warden thinks, however, in this case he will save of the two hours than would be selected with a prisoner ordinarily. In other words, Guiteau is too important a prisoner to be kept waiting.

THE DEATH WARRANT will be read in the cell. No one will be present during this proceeding except the warden and the spiritual adviser—that is to say, if Guiteau does not kill the spiritual adviser before that time in one of the outbursts of ferocity which overtake him now at times when he sees escape impossible. Outside of the cell, during the reading of the death warrant, will stand four deputies, under command of Russ, the deputy warden at the jail. The warrant having been read, Deputy Russ and one assistant will enter the cell and pinion Guiteau's arms behind him. After this is done the cell door will be opened, and Guiteau will be marched along swiftly to the gallows. He will not be allowed to stop in the rotunda to talk and declaim for the benefit of the few that will be admitted to witness the execution, but will be RUSHED ALONG to the scene of final action. He will have on each side of him a deputy warden, and will be followed by two other assistants. They will come close behind in case of a struggle or help being needed to force Guiteau to keep up the requisite speed in accordance with the warden's program. Arriving at the foot of the gallows, these two assistants will still be in reserve for the purpose of assisting Guiteau up should he require their services. Everything is possible with this ugly prisoner. The spiritual adviser and possibly the warden will accompany the prisoner to the floor of the scaffold. The spectators will take their places at the foot of the scaffold. It is not intended to allow Guiteau to make any speech, in case he should attempt a wild virulent attack upon public men, or if his remarks in any way should be of a scandalous character. He will be allowed to say anything that is reasonable or that can be expressed within reasonable limits. It is expected that the whole

SCENE UPON THE GALLOWS will not occupy over five or ten minutes. His legs will be pinioned after his arrival on the trap door. The black cap will be placed over his head by the deputy warden, Mr. Russ, and the signal for the execution—the dropping of a handkerchief—will be given by the warden, according to the present program. From the present outlook, Guiteau will probably have passed from this sphere to-morrow by 1 o'clock, or 1:30 at the very latest.

NO MORE APPEALS Guiteau said to Dr. Hicks: "Don't go to President Arthur any more. Let him come to you. I have nothing more to ask of him. If he is irrevocable decided, I appeal to the highest court. God will judge between him and me."

DANGERS OF THE RAIL.

Fearful Disaster on the New Jersey Central—Several Persons Killed—General Grant in the Accident.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 29.—The express train leaving Long Branch at five minutes past 8 this morning on the Central New Jersey, met with a terrible accident while crossing a bridge over a branch of the Shrewsbury river, near Little Silver station. The accident, no doubt, was caused by the spreading of rails. Six cars, four ordinary passenger coaches, a smoking and parlor coach left the rails and ran over the ties of the bridge, tearing them to splinters. The cars kept on the bridge until the train was half way across, when four passenger coaches and a smoking car went over into the water with a crash. The cars landed on their sides in about four feet of water. The scene that followed beggars description.

An unknown man, from Ocean Beach, was taken out dead. The cars were filled with passengers and the number injured is unknown, but there were at least 100 persons hurt one way or another.

Mr. Demorest, of Furst, Demorest & Co., Route street, New York City, was injured at the base of the skull. He will die.

It is impossible to get the names of others at present.

The physicians around the neighboring towns have been summoned. Chas. H. Foster, fireman of the engine, pulled ex President Grant out of the smoking car. Grant was not injured.

Robert Robertson, an iron merchant, from New York, was injured badly. A grocer named Edison, of Branchport, was crushed terribly.

Joe Brooks, of the firm of Brooks & Dickson, theatre troupe managers of New York, had his collar bone broken.

Morris H. Brown, son of Thomas J. Brown, superintendent of the Erie railroad, received a severe blow on the head and his back was injured.

C. J. Fox, Richmond, Va., had his hand crushed.

Jas. Malory, 202 Broadway, New York, is so badly crushed he cannot recover.

CAPERS OF A COP.

Grave Charges Preferred Against Connors by Prominent Citizens—They Are Substantiated by His Wife—Whom He Has Driven from Home.

For many months past the relations between Patrolman Connors and his wife have not been of a friendly nature. Nothing was said about the matter, however, until within the past few days, in hopes that the existing breaches might be closed. Affairs went from bad to worse until last Sunday, when Mr. Connors refused his wife admission to the house. She repaired to the residence of friends on Chicago street and remained until Tuesday morning, when she again returned to her home only to find the doors firmly bolted against her. She returned again yesterday morning and sought admission, and although Mr. Connors was in the house, he heeded not her demands. Mrs. Connors was compelled the third time to seek the home of her friends for shelter, and it is said she will remain there until the arrival of her father from Adrian, Mich., when she will accompany him home to thereafter remain. There is apparently no cause for the separation, and it seems to have been brought about solely by Mr. Connors, who was anything but kind to his wife. Mrs. Connors's brother, James Hays, lived with Mr. and Mrs. Connors at their comfortable home on East Washington street, near Calhoun, but he too was denied access to the house by the policeman. These facts were related to a SENTINEL reporter this morning by four or five prominent and respectable citizens, who say that such action on the part of a public officer, especially when uncalled for, is unbearable. What has caused the change in Mr. Connors's behavior towards his wife THE SENTINEL is not prepared to say, and can only be ascertained through an investigation which will, we understand, be had.

A reporter called on Mrs. Connors at her temporary home on Chicago street this morning, and questioned her as to the statements above made. Reluctantly and amid sobs, she admitted they were true, and added that she could not account for them. THE SENTINEL regrets exceedingly to refer to this matter, as both Mr. and Mrs. Connors have enjoyed the respect of the community since their marriage, two years and a half ago. Mr. Connors is personally a clever fellow, and has made a faithful and diligent police officer, while Mrs. Connors is said by those who know her well, to be a most amiable woman. Under these circumstances their separation is much to be regretted.

Mary Amstutz has sued her husband, John Amstutz, a wealthy farmer of Cedar Creek township, in the superior court for $10,000 damages. Slander is charged and the complaint specifies that Amstutz said to certain parties that his wife had poisoned her first husband and was endeavoring to choke him off in the same Borgian style. These people it will be remembered figured as the parties to a divorce suit in the same court some months ago. Coombs, Bell & Morris and Hartman & Fleming are attorneys for Mrs. Amstutz.

Next Monday, the Pittsburg road will put on two local trains between this city and Crestline. One will leave this city at 1:15 p. m., and the other at 7:15 p. m.

LOCAL LINES.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Lumbard went to Chicago this morning.

Mike Nelligan went to Chicago to-day to attend the races.

W. P. Cooper, of the News, is rusticiating at Rome City to-day.

George Betts, of New York city, is in town, the guest of Michael Nelligan.

Eph Spangler got drunk last night. He was fined $11.75, which assessment was stayed.

The Pittsburg round house turn table is undergoing repairs. The engines are temporarily side tracked.

Jacob Miller, whose mysterious death on the Nickel Plated road was recorded yesterday, was buried this morning.

Bids for the round house of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis road have been opened. The contract will be let shortly.

The Sunday school of the English Lutheran church is picnicing to-day. Mrs. Wagenhals is in charge of the young ones.

Beginning July 1 a through line of sleepers will be run from Cincinnati to Mackinaw over the Richmond and Grand Rapids roads.

The indications for the lower lake regions are: Local rains, northeast to southeast winds stationary or slight rise of temperature.

C. F. Lape returned last night from a tour over the Wabash and branches, between Danville and Toledo. Mr. Lape is official inspector of boilers.

Thirteen car loads of emigrants passed west on the Pittsburg road this morning. Most of them were Jews driven from Russia by that tyrannical government.

The Wabash shop closed this morning for two days in order to allow necessary repairs to be made on the stationary engine, which has done service daily for many years.

This evening Mrs. Emma Malloy, the prohibitionist, who is getting a great deal of free advertising, will speak at Hoagland. To-morrow evening she will be heard at the Centenary M. E. church.

A horse belonging to Wilding & Sons, the coal men, dropped dead this morning on the corner of Lewis and Calhoun streets. The animal was hard driven last night by a boy in the employ of the firm.

In accordance with the desires of our business men and citizens generally, expressed through THE SENTINEL exclusively a few days ago, the Grand Rapids road will put on a Saturday night train to Rome City. The train will leave this city at 9 p. m. Saturday night, returning Monday morning at 7:25. We bespeak liberal patronage for the train.

THE SENTINEL learns that a number of disaffected democrats, some weak-kneed republicans and one or two greenback demagogues propose putting up a "fusion" county ticket, a collection of mongrels who, if they were elected to office, would fight and squabble among each other for the spoils. Happily, the genuine democracy of Allen county have ever stood by the regular nominees of the party, and an effort of this kind will meet with no encouragement from honest democratic citizens. The democracy have put in nomination men who enjoy their confidence, and they propose to elect them. Every bolter from the party will be spotted. We don't need them, and when it is everlastingly too late they will whiningly crawl to the bountifully laden democratic table and humiliate themselves for the crumbs which will be denied them.

If you have a cold or cough, buy a bottle of Hill's Peerless Cough Syrup; use it all; if not satisfied, return the empty bottle and we will refund the money. We sell Peerless Worm Specific on the same terms. Cobb's Little Podophyllin Pills will cure headache or no pay. DRINKER & BAO, Feb. 13-daily.

Go to Pyke's grocery for Strawberries, Friday and Saturday. He will receive 50 bushels and will supply the trade at low prices.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29.

THE CITY.

Charles Orr, of the Hamilton bank, is quite ill.

Tickets for Pleasant Lake excursion on July 2 at Meyer Bros. & Co. and Woodworth's drug stores.

Justice Ryan yesterday found a purse containing a large sum of money. The owner can get it by identifying property.

Mrs. Charles B. Woodworth left yesterday for Indianapolis to join her husband, who is attending the State Dental association.

The Fort Wayne and Jackson railroad will sell tickets from all stations to all stations on account of the Fourth at one regular fare for the round trip.

Charles Reed, formerly fireman on the Pittsburgh, is now at Golden, Col., engaged in the lime and cement business with Joe Lyman, nephew of J. H. McCain. Mr. Lyman will visit his uncle here in August.

The managers of the "Home for Friendless and Fallen Women," have deferred their usual monthly meeting which falls on June 30th, until Friday July 7th, when it will be held at the "Home," at 3 p. m.

Joe Lohman, of M. Frank & Co., writes from his home in Bavaria, Germany, that he is enjoying himself hugely. He found his parents and friends prosperous and in good health. Mr. Lohman returns home in August.

A. D. Brandriff has resumed business at the old stand, 50, 52, 54 and 56 Columbia street. The old staff of clerks and assistants will be retained. Boser, White & Co. are the proprietors, and Mr. Brandriff simply manager.

The other day a well known physician of the city was called to treat a man living in the east end, who is nearly dead from the excessive use of opium, which he smokes. The man learned to hit the pipe from a Chinese laundryman in the city.

Rev. A. Grim, formerly of this city, where he graduated from Concordia college, and now pastor of a Lutheran church at Washington, D. C., is said to be nearly blind. Two eminent oculists have told him that he will soon be totally blind.

Last night a jolly party went to Chicago to attend the races, including W. W. Rockhill, A. F. Glutting, Dink Trentman, Harry Hamill, Charlie Beebe, Councilman Hettler, Master Mechanic Casanova, James Hughes and numerous others. The headquarters of the Fort Wayne boys will be at the Palmer.

July 15th, the venerable building on the corner of Main and Calhoun, owned by F. Eckert and Chas. McCulloch and occupied by H. W. Mitchell, dry goods and others, will be razed and replaced by a handsome three story brick structure to be occupied by A. Mergentheim & Co., the enterprising merchants.

There are in the city and stopping at a prominent hotel several gamblers from abroad, sharp and cool as cucumbers. From undoubted authority we learn that these men are here with a view to plucking a railroad man who has a big bundle, and is an infatuated gambler. The police are cognizant of the presence of these professional card-sharps.

Columbia City Post: "Fifty Fort Wayne mothers entered their darlings at the recent baby show in that city, and now forty-five of them are disappointed and very much outraged by the committee failing to award one of the five prizes to them. We imagine a baby show could not be outdone for furnishing a genuine riot among the ambitious mothers of our city."

Dr. T. J. Dills returned yesterday from Auburn, where he visited Dr. Stough in his dungeon cell. The distinguished criminal wants THE SENTINEL to correct the impression which has got abroad to the effect that his imprisonment is a farce and that he is free to come and go from the jail. Dr. Stough is subject to all the rules and discipline of the jail as an ordinary prisoner. He has strong hopes of a pardon, however.

The Indianapolis Times says that "it is predicted that Andrews, the new station on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railroad, to which point the Wabash shops were recently removed from Fort Wayne, will by the first of next year have a population of 5,000. The company owns 860 acres of the surrounding land, upon which a beautiful park is to be laid. One hundred acres are held at nominal figures to induce the employees to locate there. Additional machines and blacksmith shops and a round house are to be immediately built. In the summer the new station will be an interesting sight."

EMMA ON THE ROSTRUM.

Mrs. Emma Malloy Mashes the Susceptible Bloomingdale's --Her Effort in Behalf of "Prohibition" at the Third Street M. E. Church.

Last night, a reporter of this paper was detailed to find the Third street M. E. church, in Bloomingdale, where Mrs. Emma Malloy was announced to lecture. This lady, since her little experience at Wabash, is having a boom, and like Clara Morris' bad spine, Fanny Davenport's husband and Anna Dickinson's legs, she is turning the tribulations through which she so triumphantly passed, into a neat advertising scheme to benefit the "cause." The Third street M. E. church in Bloomingdale, is a sanctuary with which all the denizens are not familiar. THE SENTINEL man had been in Bloomingdale, but never to one of that lovely suburb's churches, and but for the kindly direction of Peter Certia, and one or two other gentlemen who gave the required information, the reporter might have got into some of the wicked and slippery places said to abound in Bloomingdale. The Third street church is a very unpretentious frame structure, and a small audience composed mostly of females, with a sprinkling of men, all mechanics in their working garb, were engaged in vigorously fanning themselves and endeavoring to digest Mrs. Malloy's remarks as our representative entered. The reporter took a seat, mopped his perspiring brow, and was about to sink his teeth into a plug of tobacco, when his eye caught a number of signs hung about with this legend: "Please do not desecrate this sanctuary by the use of tobacco," which would indicate that the presence of a reformer of the Trask order is needed at the Third street church, as well as the labor of temperance apostles.

Mrs. Malloy has a pleasing appearance and was robed in a dark alpaca dress. Her dark hair is parted on the side, giving her a rather strong minded look, and a heavy gold cable chain encircles her neck and is attached to her watch. The chain looked as if the lecture business was booming, and as the reporter caught the glitter of a diamond sparkling on the lecturer's finger, he thought what a holy as well as profitable thing it is to be a reformer.

Mrs. Malloy is a magnetic talker, but her remarks are stereotyped and her points and illustrations trite. Her harangue on "Prohibition" was an arraignment of the old political parties and a fanatical appeal for legislation upon the liquor traffic. All that she said was but a repetition of the arguments adduced by prohibitionists. Mrs. Malloy interspersed her remarks with anecdotes, which were not new, but were told cleverly with the effect of producing some hilarity. The audience appeared listless, and it is evident the temperance work is going rather slowly in Bloomingdale. Mrs. Malloy spoke about an hour and had evidently memorized her lecture. After her came Mr. Thomas Kavanaugh, who announced some of Mrs. Malloy's appointments and stirred 'em up a little himself on the prohibition question. Said he: "We must not send men to the legislature unless they are pledged to vote down this awful liquor traffic." "Ras Chittenden will have to look after Bloomingdale a little sharply, for we had it whispered to us last night by a good temperance brother that the temperance people were going to run Mr. Kavanaugh for the legislature, and this excellent gentleman is personally very popular, though his political views smack of fanaticism."

Mr. Carrington, president of the union, then arose and stated that Mrs. Malloy was dependent on contributions of her audiences for support, and gave notice that the hat would circulate for the lady's benefit. At this point an old fellow, who looked like a picture of old Scrooge, made for the door, his money jingling in his pockets. The reporter also left, followed by a frown from the temperance leaders, who, alas! could not know that for a newspaper man to give up money, even for the benefit of the "cause," would cause him to be drummed out of the profession. It is a matter of principle with us.

CITY TYPES.

No. 1--The Tart Masher.

Introductory: I have been in town long enough to observe in my quiet way a great deal of what goes on in all kinds of circles, and have been asked to record my somewhat cynical impressions of certain existing types of character to be met with in the every day life of our bustling little city. A fellow who is in the least observing of what he sees must note the various queer characters with whom he is daily brought in contact. One of these is the Tart Masher. I know what kind of hairpins hang out on our streets and in our parlors as well. In my series of sketches by the way, each individual type will have a personal entity, which, however, I shan't be mean enough to disclose. I am going to sketch from life, and if anybody's toes are stepped on, they can take the most quickly give the beautiful snap away by squealing. It will give zest and a personal interest to my little notices if somebody occasionally comes around to clean out THE SENTINEL on account of my misdoings. We have a fellow here who is paid a salary to be licked, and he hasn't been bruised so as to show marks of some venal person's teeth and nails for several months. He thinks his situation is beginning to be one round of monotony. If somebody don't soon shake him up he will resign in disgust. I want to say in advance that I won't discriminate between the sexes. There are a good many funny girls among the best sex, and I am just ungallant enough to pick 'em out and perpetuate their idiosyncrasies in cold type.

The other night as I was posing in front of a corner drug store I met one of those dizzy individuals known as the corner masher. This tart young gentleman, I had often observed before, but on the particular evening I speak of he was in his glory. His empty caput was surmounted by a diminutive straw hat with a curled brim such as are affected by juveniles not out of knickerbockers, which tile was encircled by a bright blue ribbon. He had on a suit of last summer's clothes carefully renovated, and from which an unpleasant odor of benzine was wafted to my nostrils. In his hand was a ten cent crutch cane and a bad cigar between his teeth emitted clouds of incense by no means fragrant. A shoal of gaily dressed ladies fitted past, out for an airing on this cool summer evening, and to them was the especial attention of the dizzy corner youth turned. A married lady of society came by, and the tart young man pulled his hat from his low receding forehead with a sudden jerk and grinned like an ape. The lady cast a look of commiseration, not recognition at him and went on. Here the young man was joined by another specimen of the same genus. "I tell you Will, there's my mash. Poor woman she can't help it. I tell you what, Billy, I'm pretty solid in that quarter. Did you pipe the wink she gave me. Good evening. I'm going to catch on," and the tart youth started off with a "I come high but they have to have me" air. When out of sight of his friends, the little puppy slunk down an alleyway, for I walked on the other side to watch his act. He would have no more dared to accost the lady referred to than he would to have struck Hugh Diehl a blow in the face. It is these miserable, brainless whelps who infest our street corners, night after night, ogling ladies and boasting of conquests they could never attain. When I see one of them rapped smartly across his posterior with a cane in the hand of some irate person who loses all patience, I'll be the first to circulate a subscription paper to buy this public benefactor a silver tea set properly inscribed, or something else nice. Most of these fellows are starveling little counter jumpers whose lan'ladies apprehensively watch their exit from the boarding house every morning lest they jump a hash bill with their effects done up in a newspaper. I am sorry to see some of the specimens I speak of received too in what purports to be good society hereabouts. The little snoozer of this kind plumes himself on this fact, and bandies about on his foul tongue the names of our pure daughters, sisters, and as often our wives. I recommend as a stern remedy to this evil that inasmuch as the police won't club these fellows from the corners they infest, the proprietors of the stores come out and bounce 'em. Especially around drug stores are these nuisances found. As a consequence, the business of the stores suffer. People will not run the gauntlet of the insolent stare which they receive from these cattle.

Let some one think I have reference to decent people who pause on street corners as decent people do and properly, I hasten to say that they need have no fears of being mistaken for the class referred to here. The tart masher is unmistakable. Spot him. A ROUNDY.

The Columbia City Post says: "Hon. A. P. Edgerton delivered the address to the graduates of Fort Wayne college. The peculiarity of the address lies in its simplicity. Every word found in the entire speech is a monosyllable—a word of one syllable. The gentleman did not choose this simple style of diction, we suppose, merely that the class could understand him, but to show them that out of little things great things can be made."

A BIG TUMBLE!

Owing to the lateness of the season we are daily buying goods away below the cost of the material the garments are made of. We closed out eight different big lots Boys' Jackets and Pants, one marked to sell at $2 25, $2 75, $3 50 and $4 75. Every one is worth from $1 to $3 more; and six lots Boys' full Suits at $5 50, $6 75 and $8. Their equal you cannot get within $2 of our price. Money refunded if goods do not give perfect satisfaction.

GOOD VALUE.

Our all-wool Men's Cassimere Pants at $2.50 and $3.00, then our extra strong made laboring Pants at $1, $1.25 and $1.50, and a big assortment of Boys Pants at 75c, 85c, $1 and $1.25.

ONE THOUSAND

Men's Suits at $6, $8, $10 and $12. Any of the above lots we were unable to buy 6 weeks ago for prices we are now selling them for.

Dr. Frothingham and Kingsley of the Grand Rapids English Medical and Surgical Institute, 85 Monroe street have arrived in our city and have established a branch at 34 West Main street, Aufrecht's block. Fort Wayne, where our many citizens now under their treatment can consult with them; also any who may wish to obtain the benefit of their accurate diagnosis of their diseases without questions and free of charge, thus giving every one the privilege of their unprecedented experience in their specialty, without the heretofore long journey to their institute in Grand Rapids. For the past three years so frequent and imperative have the demands that they should personally visit their many patients in our city, and Northern Indiana, that they have at last consented, and will charge nothing for all those coming under their treatment the first 29 days. Drs. F. & K. establish all by the accuracy of their diagnosis almost almost instant; they locate every ache and pain; explain how and why the disease or ailment was contracted, and demonstrate how it can be eradicated and in what length of time; these facts are said by their patients to be marvelous. The question is now, "can we be cured?" Drs. F. & K. take no cases pronounced by any incurable, but to state the case to the patient. They have no time for experiments; their time is all occupied treating those they can cure.

A thousand testimonials from Grand Rapids can be seen at their office, some of which we would print had room.

MAIMED FOR LIFE.

Joseph Sapp, a Farmer, Nearly Killed by the Reckless Driving of a Drunken Companion-- A Frightful Plunge Down an Embankment.

Yesterday evening Messrs. W. P. Chapman, H. W. Mordhurst and Henry Meyer secured Powers & Barnett's big 'bus, and loaded with ladies and gentlemen of society, the vehicle started for the hospitable farm house of Mr. McMacken, three and a half miles east of the city on the Maumee turnpike. When the 'bus had arrived just west of the powder house, where the road is narrow and there are steep embankments on either side, the rattle of wheels were heard behind and a farm wagon, in which were six barrels of lime, came tearing along. When just behind the 'bus the driver, who was evidently intoxicated, emitted a wild whoop, and lashing his horses, started to pass the 'bus. The road being narrow this was impossible, but the foolhardy farmer did not consider his peril until it was too late. To avoid a collision the countryman pulled his horses to the left and down the steep embankment full fifteen feet went horses and heavily loaded wagon. As the wagon toppled over, the driver, who was on the right side, jumped and landed safe in the road, but a companion who was sitting on the left side could not save himself, and went down. The heavy wagon fell on him with the six barrels of lime, and he lay as dead. A wild scene of confusion ensued. The ladies in the 'bus screamed with terror, and the struggling horses tried to break their traces and be free of the wreck. Mr. Mordhurst and the other gentlemen got out of the 'bus and went to the relief of the unfortunate man, who was insensible. The gentlemen urged the drunken farmer to go for a physician for his injured friend, but the fellow heartlessly refused and followed on after his horses, who had extricated themselves and dashed on. Water was brought and the injured man, whose name is Joseph Sapp and his occupation a farmer, revived and groaned piteously. The gentlemen secured a plank and improvising a stretcher, Sapp was taken to the nearest farm house and Drs. Wheelock and Buchman sent for. It was found that his hip bone was broken and his head, neck and body terribly bruised. The physicians say he will recover, but will be maimed for life and unable to walk, possibly. The accident occurred about 5 o'clock and the party on their way to the McMacken farm.

fering intense pain. The drunken fellow, through whose recklessness the accident occurred, had removed the wreck of his wagon and the barrels of lime and had not even enquired after the condition of Sapp. We did not learn the man's name.

It is reported that on several occasions people have been stopped on the bridge near the woolen mill and robbed of small sums. Women have been stopped and jewels removed from their ears. The most singular thing is that one of the footpads appears to be a woman dressed in male attire. The voice is feminine, the feet small and the face smooth. A week ago to night a young man living on Spy Run avenue was halted and $5 taken from his pockets.

The old building on Main street lately occupied by Justice Pratt is being refitted for Harry Brelsford's produce exchange. The partition has been removed, making one apartment of the lower floor, which is being fitted up with blackboards, railed counters, etc. A telegraph wire will connect from the Western Union office, and a telephone and other conveniences are being put in.

President Parry, of the Richmond, and Superintendent O'Rourke, of the Grand Rapids and Indiana, returned from Indianapolis yesterday. Superintendent O'Rourke went to Grand Rapids this morning. The Mackinaw extension of the Grand Rapids road, running from Petoskey to Mackinaw, is completed. The Grand Rapids now has 455 miles of main track.

O. L. Perry returned from Chicago last night. He saw the Hanlons in "Le Voyage Suisse," and Sardou's comedy of "Odette," by Augustin Daly's company. Mr. Daly by the way, married the niece of Judge O'Rourke, of this city.

Maggie Driscoll, the prosecuting witness in the McDowell abortion case, is at the home of her brother-in-law, Sylvester Gaylord, who lives on Gay street.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29.

FALSE AND TRUE.

Why am I engaged to Walter Clyde? Do I love him? It is all the same, however, whether I do or not. He is very handsome, very fascinating, and perhaps I adore beauty all the more because I am a little pale faced, insignificant creature myself. To be sure, I have enormous brown eyes; but they are my only redeeming feature, and the fact that my nose is "tip tilted" cannot be denied. We have a certain amount of money, mother and I—there are only we two—so we enjoy ourselves after our own fancy. Just now it has led us, for the summer, to a breezy little village among the mountains in Cumberland.

Mr. Clyde has followed us, of course. We have been engaged six months, and are to be married in autumn.

Mother never liked him. He is twelve years older than I, who am 18. She says he is attracted by my money, that he is a man of the world, probably with debts of honor that his wife's money will pay.

My poor mamma is not wrong, and her only daughter is very wilful.

I shall marry Walter, for I love him: so the matter rests.

I am lying in a hammock in a shady part of the lawn; presently my cousin Celestine comes in and takes a vacant chair near me. Mamma has invited her to stay several weeks with us, and she has been here a day or two.

Celestine is a thoroughly accomplished, beautiful woman of twenty-four.

Walter was very much impressed when mamma introduced them; I could see that, though when we were alone he only said, "how marvellously beautiful your cousin is!"

She is dangerously beautiful just now, as she leans back in her chair. Her gold colored hair is coiled in a thick knot at the back and ripples all over her head. Her blue lawn dress is not so high at the throat as to conceal the faultless neck, and the sleeves are not so long that the rounded white arms are hidden. One jewel—an almost priceless amethyst—glitters on her perfect hand. Verily, my cousin understands the art of dress.

Presently Walter comes up the steps and approaches us. It does not occur to me that Celestine has from her window seen him approaching, and come down to meet him. I am not easily made jealous; besides, I am not well versed in the art of a flirt; I learn some of them later. I rise from the hammock and seat myself near my cousin. It is not a wise thing to do, for my plain face makes a splendid foil to Celestine's superb beauty. I do not think of this now, however.

"Oh, Mr. Clyde," she exclaimed, "how can you venture out in the heat? I should fear speedy dissolution if I attempted it."

"It would not be wise for you to venture," he replies. "I should have hardly gone myself had I realized how warm it is. I have been arranging for a sail to-night, if you two ladies will honor me with your company"—for the first time looking at me.

"How good of you!" cries Celestine. "I have been anxious to have a sail ever since I saw that lovely lake. We shall be delighted."

I say nothing. Walter remarks carelessly—

"Be sure and be ready at 7."

"Thank you," I replied guiltily, "I don't care about going."

"How provoking you are, Marjorie!" my cousin says, pettishly. You said this morning that you wanted to have a sail."

"My dear," I coolly replied, I have changed my mind; but that does not hinder you from going."

"Certainly not," says Walter, eagerly. "Marjorie takes whims sometimes. I have engaged the boat. Surely both ladies will not disappoint me."

Celestine hesitates, apparently, and looks towards the lake.

She flushes slightly; and just then mother calls me, and I leave them. After tea Walter and I were in the drawing room, Celestine was up stairs getting her hat, when presently Walter remarked:

"You had better change your mind, Marjorie, and come with us."

I felt that his words were not sincere—that he would much rather I did not go; so I laughed and said:

"No; I am going to finish a book this evening."

And soon my cousin came down stairs, and they went without me.

After this the flirtation progressed with astonishing rapidity. Everyone in the house was talking of it, and in pure self defense I accepted the attentions offered by other men.

There is a certain spice in flirting with an engaged girl, and I had plenty of devoted cavaliers.

Mr. Clyde did not interfere with me, nor I with him. Celestine did not mention his name to me, and I never spoke of her to him.

Sometimes I wondered what they intended to do, and if my recreant lover intended to return to his allegiance in course of time. I was soon to find out.

It was an excessively warm day, and I had wandered out into the woods not far from the house, and found a comparatively cool place under the trees, and, endeavoring to read, had fallen asleep.

I was awakened by voices on the other side of a group of saplings which hid me from the speakers, and immediately I recognized them.

"But, Celestine, my darling, I love you! You won't tell me that my love is hopeless?"

"Really, Mr. Clyde," my cousin laughed ironically, "you are too absurd, and, considering Marjorie's claims, are going too far."

"Never mind Marjorie," he returned. "What can she be to me after having known you? I tell you I love you! Do you understand?" His voice was deep with passion. "Marjorie will forget me in a little while."

How Chinamen Bargain for Wives.

An Australian Chinaman, when anxious to have a wife of his own nation, sends a letter to an agent in Hong Kong. The following is a condensed translation of the epistle:

"I want a wife. She must be a maiden under twenty years of age and must not have left her father's house. She must have never read a book and her eye-lashes must be half an inch in length. Her teeth must be as sparkling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the scents of the magnificent odor groves of Java and her attire must be from the silken weavers of the Ka Li-Ching which are on the banks of the greatest river in the world—the ever-flowing Yangtze Kiang."

The price of a Chinese woman delivered in Sydney is $38, but two Chinese women only cost $52; therefore, the heathen Chinese import women in couples. The importer never sees his women before they arrive and then he generally selects the best looking one. The other is shown around to a number of well-to-do Chinamen, and after they have inspected her, she is submitted to what may be called public auction. At a recent sale at Sydney a young girl aged about nineteen was offered, and after some spirited bidding she was purchased by a wealthy Chinese storekeeper, whose place of business is in one of the leading towns of New South Wales, for $120. The melancholy aspect of the Celestial girl as he went away in company with the man who purchased her, was deplorable to the last degree.—North China Herald.

An Arizona Innocent.
Last night a man named Lyle, from the wild western prairies, arrived in town with his wife and babies, and put up at the Hedekin house. On the street Mr. and Mrs. Lyle met a young fellow well known about town, and insisted that he was Lyle's cousin, a Wabash engineer. The young man nothing loth, accepted the situation, and made himself so agreeable that he was enabled to borrow $5 from his newly formed relative. Lyle afterward found that his cousin had left, and that he had been played for a sucker. He made several bluffs at his "cousin" with a gun, but this failing to make him disgorge, he got Deputy Marshal Myer to arrest the young man this morning. The matter was compromised by the Arizona man being paid back the amount loaned, and the pseudo cousin is again to be found in his old haunts.

The Regatta.
The regatta yesterday, given by the St. Joe Rowing club, on the river above Centlivre's brewery, was largely attended despite the unpleasant weather. The single pleasure boat race was won by P. Henkenius, who carried off the silver cup. George Keifer won the swimming match. Henkenius and Lavanway took the silver cups in the double pleasure boat race. The double crew, O Prince and Fred Miller, won the match between double and four, receiving a $10 gold piece. The tub race, one of the amusing events of the day, was won by Joe Centlivre over eleven competitors. The junior single scull was won by Charles Centlivre, purse of $50. The senior single scull was taken by Charles Prince, distance one and one-half miles, time nine minutes. A purse of $100 was up on this race by outside parties. Joe Centlivre won the free for all race. The log rolling match and barrel race had to be omitted. Marshal Frank Falker and Councilman F. C. Boltz were judges and Louis Centlivre, referee. The boys, we are glad to hear, made a snug sum on the regatta.

August 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 occurs at Detroit the regattas of the National Amateur Oarsmen's association and the Northwestern Amateur Oarsmen's association. The St. Joe Rowing club of this city is entered. Fred Miller and Charles Prince will row double, Prince, the senior single and Fred Miller, the junior single.
